SERIOUS CHARGES.

A Contractor Says Ugly Things About a District Employe,

Captain Ressell, the Assistant Englneer Commissioner, is considering charges brought by Charles Donaldson, a conwactor, against Joseph Curran. supervisor of roads in the District west of Rock Creek. Donaldson claims that Corran has appropriated stone, timber, and other materials belonging to the District to his own purposes, and that he has used District carts for hauling material in filling contracts for outside parties. It is also charged that certain persons using their carrs in the employ of the District have be n docked with-cut reason by Curran.

Supervisor Curran refused last night either to deny or admit the charges. His first statement, be says, will be made before the Commissioners. The charges were brought some time ago by Donaldson, but were dropped, and then afterwards reopened by Curran himself.

HAD A GOOD TIME.

Ent Had to Answer for it in the Police Court,

David Grady, an employe of the Eckington Company, hired a buggy yesterday afternoon and went out on a lop on First street, and thence through K street and New Jersey avenue to the Boundary. Several policemen tried to stop the man, but without avail.

Officer Dean of the Second precinct succeeded in getting a saddle horse and following the reckless driver, even then he had a bard chase of it. He caught him near the old "Half-Way House" and at the time the horse was completely fagged out. Grady was locked up charged with cruelty to animals, fast driving and with being drunk and

In the Police Court this morning the evidence given by the officers and others who witnessed Grady's wild ride gave some very severe evidence against him. Judge Mills looked upon the charge as being of a more serious nature than ordinary, and fined the defendant $40 or six months in jail.

LOST HIS LEG.

A Boy's Foelish Effort to Jump From

a Moving Car. Lawrence Tucker, a white newsboy 14 years of age, had his left leg cut off by a Fourteenth street car last evening. He made a foolish effort to jump from the platform of one car to that of another coming from an opposite direction, and, missing his footing, full beneath the wheels. The boy was re-moved to Keim's drug store and taken from there to his home, 1824 Fifteenth Fined for Sunday Har.

M. J. McNamara, the keeper of a bar-room at 213 Third street southeast, was in the Police Court this morning for selling liquor on Sunday. The sale was shown by witnesses to have been made, but the defendant claimed that on the date of the sale he was not the owner of the place, but had transferred his license to Michael Schwartz. According to the records at the District Commissioners office the transfer was not officially made until July 31, some days after McNamara turned over his business to Schwartz. Judge Mills thought otherwise, and imposed the usual fine of $20.

Police Officer Frank Hutton has sent in his resignation to the District Commissioners. He did this in consequence of a decision given by Comptroller of the Treasury Mathews, who held that the appointment was tavalld owing to the Army and Navy clause Mr. Hutten ascertained that he could not get his money for the time he had aerxed fet alone for any more time put in. The matter of his obtaining compensation for the time already served may be tested in the courts.

Changed During His Absence, Some months ago Charles Blanford was convicted of selling liquor without a license and fixed $50. He took an appeal and shortly afterward went to see, and only returned last night. In the measurime the decision in regard to appeals had been made by the higher court, and when Blanford reached the city he was arrested for contempt of court. Judge Mills, however, did not hold him for contempt upon the pay-

SENT THEIR REGRETS.

The Mass Meeting to Favor the Porce Bult a Fatture, Colonel Perry Carson did not look cappy last night at Grand Army Hall. He had formulated what was to have been a grand mass meeting of persons in favor of the Federal Election bill, but the demonstration did not pan out as the redoubtable Perry had antici-pated. It was not a Carson victory. The attendance, both of white and col-ored people, was small, and it was evi-dent from the looks and actions of the former that they had been drawn to the meeting more from carticity than any meeting more from curiosity than any-thing else. They went there expecting to see such 'invited speakers' as Speaker Reed. Minister Douglas and others, but there was not a man of na-tional reputation upon the platform. An orchestra seated upon the platform performed at intervals.

The officers of the meeting were: 'resident, R. H. Gicaves first viceresident, B. H. Gicaves first vice-resident, P. H. Carson; second vice-resident, C. M. Ferguson; secretary, Robert P. Campbell; first assistant so-retary, D. H. Moffli; second assistant secretary, Joseph Wells.

A considerable amount of time was-consumed in reading letters of regret from parties who all seemed to have had previous engagements, and in conseprevious engagements, and in consequence could not be present at the meeting. Among them were letters from Frederick Douglass, Senator Chapdler, Representatives Greenhalge, Mudd, McDuffle, Grosvenor, Rowell, Lodge Post, Morse, Commissioner J. W. Douglass, First Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson and Robert Purvis of Philadelphia.

A lengthy series of resolutions favoring the Lodge Federal Election bill were submitted and adopted virus rock, Speeches were made by Dr. Charles B. Purvis, Charles W. Anderson, president Young Men's Colored Republican Club

WRITING IN FICTION.

What Phrases are Indispensable in Modern Writing.

From Regimah, Sir Arthur Heln 'You stab me to the heart and leave ne on the ground. I assure you it is of to use. An indispensable's heart is quite differently placed from that of any other man. The desperate wound you gave me was in fact the best surgical treatment that could be devised for a slight internal complaint which I labor under, and you will find me as lively as ever in the third volume and ready to unmask your wicked designs.

"Or it is a dark, gusty night. We politely edge me over the side of the yessel and go to sleep in your hammock, feeling that you have done a good stroke of business. What do I do: The ship is only going nineteen knots an hour-I therefore easily swim to her and secrete myself in the stays or the main chains, or the shrouds, or the dead lights or some of those mystertous places in a ship which Sir Arthur knows all about. There I stick like a barnacle, and you carry me into port with you. I can tell you that when you are just about to make the most advantageous marriage I shall put my head in at the church door and say, 'Ha' with a loud voice and the whole affair will be broken off.

"Or you poison me. Bless your heart, poison has no more effect on my Mith idatic constitution than giager beerprobably not so much.

'You bury me. No, you don't. You don't bury me, but some intrusive fellow who has thrust himself in to take my place; for an indispensable has al-ways about him obliging persons who do that kind of work for him. 'Or you burl me down from the cliff 300 feet high, and go away thinking you have now really got rid of me for good and all. But, Mr. Villain, you are much mistaken. I, as an indispensable, inevitably fall upon a sea anemone—rather a large one, three feet square and two feet thick, very common, however, on that part of the casat. The poor anemone is somewhat injured and I am a little shaken, but I shall appear again at the right time with my fatal 'Ha!' and upset your marriage."
